was in order, or not; but, at all events, they were of a character to arouse the indignation of Bowman, and he stood up and charged White with having twice lied, repeating the expression. Mr. White turned upon him, and struck him. The Court interfered, and the parties immediately submitted to its authority. His Honor concluded by stating that if the parties had anything to say, he was ready to hear them.

Mr. Bowman then rose and said, that with regard to himself, he had little to say; he was not the aggressor, his opponent had indulged in a course of commentary not warranted by the evidence, and he knew that a portion of those remarks, and which was not the least galling, were not heard by the Court from the position and distance between his Honor and Mr. White. There were certainly some of the expressions which his Honor did not hear—his opponent had called him (Bowman) a "New Zealander," and charged him with keeping up an amatory correspondence with a negro wench, and that during her examination on the prosecutions out of which this trial had arisen, he (Bowman) had by nods and winks kept up a communication with her, and caused her to change or vary her testimony at pleasure, none of which facts have been sworn to in this cause. He would further remark, that during the trial he tooky very little part in it. He neither opened the case, examined a witness, or summed up the cause; the whole of his time was taken up in taking notes; yet not withstanding, during the whole course of the trial, he was personally attacked by the counsel. He had nothing more to say, but submit himself to the judgment of the court and the gentleman, after so short a professional acquaintance. It was true, as he remarked that he (Mr. White) had been commenting on the conduct of the gentleman with some degree of severity, but not on his conduct during this trial. It was to his conduct of the gentleman with some degree of severity, but not on his conduct during this trial. It was the cause and said, that he conduct of the different prose

SUPERIOR COURT.—Before Chief Justice Oakley.—Hénry C. Beals and John N. Beach, vs. Roderick Terry and Roderick Terry, Jr.—This was an action on the case to recover damages for a breach of contract. On the 26th March, 1847, the firm of Clarke and Coleman entered into a contract with the defendants of which the following is a copy:—"Fer value received, we have this day sold and agreed to deliver to Messrs. Terry & Co., in the city of New York, 2000 barrels superfine flour, City mills, Rochester," at $6 per barrel, payable on delivery of each parcel, to be delivered at our option in all the month of June next, in parcels of not less than 200 barrels each; any variation from superfine to be settled at the usual rates of difference. New York, March 25th, 1847. C. & Co." On the 25th May following, Terry & Co. assigned the contract, and gave a guaranty for its fulfilment to the plaintiffs, in consideration of $4500, and an order on Clarke and Coleman for its delivery. Clarke and Coleman were unable to fulfil their contract, there being none of the "City mills, Rochester," brand in the market on the 30th of June, the last day for delivoring the flour. The plaintiffs sought to recover the difference between the highest price of flour, which was on the 21st June, and the contract price. The defence set up was, performance. It appeared that on the day the contract matured, Clarke and Coleman called on the plaintiffs, and offered them flour of a quality equal to the "City mills, Rochester," but a different brand, which they refused. They then offered them the difference between the contract price and what it would sell for on that day, which was also declined. The plaintiffs proved that on the 21st June, the brand mentioned in the contract was selling at $5.0 no of their witnesses also swore that he had 500 barrels on hand on the 30th June, sand

Movements of Distinguished Individuals.

Gen. Scott.—The N. O. Delta of the 3d inst. says:
We heard yesterday that orders were in this city, which would probably detain Gen. Scott in Mexico longer than he expected. Those orders relate to some matters before the Court of Inquiry, which will have to be investigated in Mexico. It was originally Gen. Scott's intention to proceed immediately from Vera Cruz to New York, by sea, and to avoid as much as possible all public parade and display. But as there are no steamers in Vera Cruz, destined for New York, he will no doubt be compelled to come to New Orleans. Without wishing to thwart any of the brave old General's desires, we cannot but rejoice over the accident, which will enable New Orleans to display to the laurelled chief, the deep gratitude and warm admiration which they entertain for his splendid services.

Gen. Twiggs left Philadelphia on Friday, for Washington. A dinner was tendered to him in the former city, which he was constrained to decline on account of business which called him hence.

The Hon. A. P. Butler passed through this city yes-terday on his way to his residence, his absence from his public duties being occasioned by the illness of two members of his family.—Charleston News, May 10.

Importations via New York.

It has been a question, says the British Colonist, whether British manufactured goods, imported via New York, and sent forward under bond to Canada, would be admitted on the same terms as if imported by the St. Lawrence under the new customs act. The question has been set at rest by the Commissioner of Customs, and the interpretation given by that officer to the new law is that upon which the Customs Department will act. The subjoined opinion has been elicited by a letter asking for information on the point, addressed by Messrs. Shaw, Turnbull & Co., of this city, to the Customs Department; and the Commissioner having forwarded a copy of his reply to the Toronto Board of Trade, conceiving that it might possibly be of interest to the board, we beg to acknowledge the politeness of the secretary, in having made us acquainted therewith, and in enabling us to subjoin the following copy of the letter in question:—

Wm. E. Lehman, jr., and N. P. Brown, Esqs., the counsel for Bechtel, (who is now a raving maniac,) made an informal application to the Court this morning, to have the prisoner removed from the county prison to the insane department of the Blockley Alms-house, offering to prove that their client is now insane, that the malady is hereditary in his family, and that his reason was impaired a short time previous to the commission of the crime. They stated that his violence was so great that no clothing could be kept upon his person, and that he was chained to the floor of his cell, and his hands also fettered. In reply, the Court stated that the application should, properly, come from the inspectors of the prison, before any thing could be done in regard to the prisoner.

The city councils last evening passed resolutions tendering the use of Independence Hall to General Cadwalader, in which to receive the congratulations of those bodies and his fellow-citizens generally, on his return home to his native city.

A resolution was also introduced, tendering the use of this same room to the whig national convention, but it was opposed by some of the more sensible members of the select council. It, however, passed that body, but was defeated in the other branch. The resolution was only introduced, for the purpose of making a complimentary offer to the convention, as its small size renders it entirely unfit, and arrangements have already been made to meet in the Museum. Mr. Chandler in opposing the resolution, alluded to the hall being now draped in mourning in respect to the memory of Mr. Adams, and said that as he felt much interest in the success of the candidate to be nominated by the convention, he would therefore, prefer that the assembly should meet in some place less gloomy and ominous than it now appears.

Movements and Counter-Movements of the Friends of Mr. Clay and Mr. Corwin—Arrival of Mr. Corwin at Cincinnati-Revived Hopes of his Friends of his Nomination-Opinions of several Whig Presses against Mr. Clay's Nomination-General Taylor's Last In a letter I despatched from the interior of the State, I stated one of the effects of Mr. Clay's "consenting" letter, was that of an impression among his friends, who, notwithstanding his long silence, did not cast about to express an opinion in favor of any other whig, but were for Mr. Clay all the time, that some arrangement may have been made by which the friends of Mr. Corwin would share an undue portion of the spoils for aiding in the election of Mr. Clay; and that in reference to such a supposed state of things, Mr. Ewing left his home at Lancaster, and proceeded with all possible speed towards Ashland, and was still tarrying in Cincinnati. On my arrival here, yesterday, I found that similar feeling had been evidenced here; but that Mr. Ewing was satisfied from the explanation of Mr. Clay

Ewing was satisfied from the explanation of Mr. Clay, made through a special confidential messenger despatched from this city, that he still regards Mr. Corwin as among his rivals for the Presidency, and not among the least formidable!

And it is now also fully developed, that the apparent "failing in" with Mr. Clay's "consent" to be the whig candidate, on the part of the friends of Mr. Corwin, was designed to draw him out on the "new issue" before the country, which, involving as it does, the question of admitting into the Union any new State whose constitution allows negro slavery, they suppose he would take such a position in regard to it as to remove entirely his chance of a nomination.

In the midst of the moves which these impulses gave rise to, all classes were not a little surprised on day before yesterday, at the sudden appearance, in their midst, of the veritable Hon. Thomas Corwin himself, and evidencing to all who have called upon him at his room in the Pearl Street House, a confidence of success in his own nomination, which inspires his friends to renewed exertions. In fact, that he has laid aside his hitherto sang-froid declarations, that he could not reasonably expect a nomination at this time, but had no objection to receive the compliment of being proposed by the "Ohio delegation," have given way to a desire that his western friends should extend their efforts in his behalf for a little higher "glory" than that of a complimentary support.

"Ohio delegation," have given way to a desire that his western friends should extend their efforts in his behalf for a little higher "glory" than that of a complimentary support.

It is whispered in whig circles, that Mr. Corwin has been so highly flattered by his reception during the recent visit he made through the New England States, as to have become quite sanguine that if Mr. Clay was out of the way, the nomination would be conferred upon himself. The similarity of topic, and even of language used, during yesterday, by the known friends of Mr. Corwin was no striking as to induce the remark of three out of four whig gentlemen, in reply to the ordinary inquiry of "What's going in politics today?" that the friends of Mr. Corwin must be speaking "per order," in saying that but for the sympathy felt towards Mr. Clay personally, by the whigs in the east, and the dread of the loco-foce hurricane of thunder which would be hurled upon them for deserting the "embodiment of whig principles," Mr. Corwin would receive the support of the entire New England delegation; and would, at all events, receive it, if Mr. Clay was not nominated by the first ballot!

This being a train of representation of which nothing had been said before the arrival of Mr. Corwin, but was on yesterday in the mouth of each of his known friends, it has quite naturally been inferred that the assertion, if not made by "authority," was at least in accordance with Mr. Corwin's own opinion.

It is presumed that Mr. Corwin's own opinion.

Again! beg leave to announce to the readers of the Heraid, that the assertion advanced by many, that Mr. Clay's "consenting" letter has decided the action of the whig convention, is made without due observation and a full knowledge of the feeling pervading the whig ranks, and will soon be an "obsolete idea."

In addition to the daily evidence we have of the determination of the friends of Mr. Corwin to press him to the consideration of the convention, here is daily more and more opposition to Mr. Clay's nomination thr whig presses, which I beg leave to present, not only to the consideration of the readers of the Herald in New York, but elsewhere;—

"Since Mr. Clay announced his willingness to accept a nomination for the Presidency, and submitted his claims to the national convention, in common with those of other distinguished whigs the whig press, in the performed of its bounden duty—duty to editors, readers, the century and Mr. Clay—is calmly and coolly That highly respectable and influential journal, the Cleveland Herald—the leading whig paper one western Reserve—enters into a long argument on the subject. The principle gist of the reasoning is—that Mr. Clay, in consequence of his Alabama letter, does not stand so well with the Northernew of his Alabama letter, does not stand so well with the Northernew of his Alabama letter, does not stand so well with the Northernew of his Alabama letter, the stand of the subject of the Northernew of his Alabama letter, does not stand so well with the Northernew of his Alabama letter, the notice of the subject of the subject of the subject of the Northernew of the subject of the Northernew of the subject of the notice of Northernew of the subject of Northernew of the subject of Northernew of the not astalled by the concessions made by Mr. Clay, as a South in not astalled by the concessions had by Mr. Clay, as a Northern alaxeholder, without expressing its individual choice, the Herald is clearly of the opinion that Mr. Clay ought not again to be convention should at the upon him.

The Marietta Intelligencer, another influential whig paper, puts forth an article, similar in argument and convention, to that ment, if you could persuade the imperious Scott to give into it.

Millard Fillmore is preferred for the Presidency, by the Michigan Expositor.

The lapse of a few weeks will see these matters all settled. Meantime, it is as well that our readers be fully advised as to how "the land lies."

General Taylor's Baton. Rouge letter, addressed to Captain Allison, made its appearance in the papers here this morning, but made no sensation. Alas' who is there likely to evidence any feeling, one way or the other, of what the honest, plain speaking old soldier says? "I shall engage in no schemes, no combinations, no intrigues," says the General; yet, to my certain knowledge, his name has not been used in this city in any other connection, so far as the Presidency is concerned. With all the professed friendship for the old hero, it is doubtful whether his name will be found among the ballotings of the national convention:

The stockholders, however, suggested to the directors of the aforesaid companies, that they have the charter of the Belvidere Delaware Railroad carefully examined before making said subscription.

The amount of coal transported on the Schuylkill Canal, for the week ending the 4th instant, was 10,240 tons; previously, 36,992 tons; total for the season, 47,233 tons. The business on this canal is increasing weekly, as the number of boats in operation become larger. The only thing now wanting is facilities to get coal to market as rapidly as it is prepared along the ine. The canal is in admirable order and its canacity is equal to an immense business.

The Reading Railroad is doing a fair amount of business; but the prospect is, that the aggregate will not nuch exceed that of last year. Even with the income of 1847, and the reported net income, there is no rea son why this concern should not ultimately be re-lieved from its financial embarrassments. The act which has recently passed the legislature of Fennsylvanis, authorizing an issue of four and a half millions of preferred stock, will, if judiciously managed, relieve the old stock of a great deal of the fancy character it now possesses. The old stock will be in a much better position behind preferred stock, than behind mortgage or any other bonds. Whether the bondholders would accept the exchange is a doubtful question, as their security now is undoubted, and the payment of interest is certain; whereas, by the transfer or exchange, the security would be depreciated, without, perhaps, endangering much the punctuality of the payment of dividends or interest. We see no other way to extricate the company from the embarrassments with which they are surrounded, than by an issue of preferred stock; but if that stock is brought upon the market, and the sale of it forced to raise funds to meet the inand the sale of it forced to raise funds to meet the indebtedness as it matures, the actual liabilities of the company will be increased, although they may be placed in a more manageable shape. From the first commencement of this road to the close of the last year, this company have been under heavy annual expenditures on account of construction, independent of the current running expenses. This has absorbed not only the whole of the net earnings, but has involved the company in difficulties, from which, at the time there appear no possible way of extricating it. For the purpose of carrying out the plans of the company, and for furnishing proper facilities to carry on, as expeditiously as possible, the coal transportation business, immense debts have been contracted, and the credit of the concern strained to the utmost. The road is now completed, and its furniture and machinery equal to any emergency; the expenditures on account of construction, have, therefore, ceased, and the work is, without doubt,

the exception of the usual wear and tear of machinery, and the necessary road repairs, the running expenses will hereafter be the only outlay required, leaving the metine of the company of debtedness as it matures, the actual liabilities of the ing about one million of dollars net. If this one million of dollars could have been applied entirely to the paying and of dollars could have been applied entirely to the paying and of dollars could have been applied entirely to the paying and of dollars could have been applied entirely to the paying and of dollars could have been applied entirely to the paying and of dollars could have been applied entirely to the paying and a handsome per cent on the whole amount of liabilities, bonds, and stock; but as a portion of it was appropriated to construction account, a dividend on the capital stock was made in new shares. We will not stop here to question the policy of this movement, as there are many arguments for and against; but will proceed to show that the finances of the company are not really in such a desperate position as many would have the public believe. It is true its debt is large, and, unfortunately, its liabilities are in a bad shape; but the road is an immense concern, and its importance to the community at large is great. Every man, woman, and child in the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and several other States, are interested in the success of this railroad, either in the hands of this or some other company, particularly on account of the important bearing it has upon the price of coal; and we cannot for a moment doubt the ability of the management to relieve the concern from the burden which now presses on it. The whole attention of the direction should be turned to the bonds; the stock is a secondary consideration—left that take care of itself—provide for the payment of the direct debt of the Company, by an increase of the indirect debt, upon reasonable terms, and place all the of the Herald. The Intelligencer "cottons" to the idea of nominating General Scott.

As the other hand, the Pittsburgh Commercial Journal, a good paper, in many respects, has doused the Taylor flag, and run up that of Old Hal, since the letter of the 10th inst. The editors of the Journal is bound to give Mr. Clay a lift, whenever the "cembodiment," as his political enemies very facetiously call him, takes the field.

The Zanesville Courier, whose editor thinks it more important that Ohio should be white than that the white should succeed in the Presidential election, proposes Mr. Clay for President, and General Scott for Vice. This would, doubtless be a good arrangement, if you could persuade the imperious Scott to give into it.

Millard Fillmore is preferred for the Presidency, by the Michilard Election, proposes of the company are proceed to show that the finances of the company are proceed to show that the finances of the company are itself-provide for the payment of the direct debt of the Company, by an increase of the indirect debt, upon reasonable terms, and place all the creditors upon a par. Then, and not till then, should dividends be made on the stock, and if they should be-gin as low as two or three per cent., the shares would command a better price in the market, and the whole concern would be upon a better basis. The Reading Railroad Company have almost the monopoly of a transportation business which will give it a gross income ranging from two to two and a half millions of dollars per annum, and from this it can earn a net income of at least one million of dollars. This will pay a dividend of seven per cent on twelve millions of dollars. and leave a surplus of one hundred sixty thousand dol-lars per annum for contingencies, or for the nucleus of a sinking-fund for the reduction of the capital of the company. It therefore appears that there is a prospect of this company becoming extricated from the position in which financiering upon an extensive scale, in the face of a tainted credit, has placed it.

The Flour market, owing to increased arrivals, was less firm, and sales were made at a slight decline, compared with previous rates. Wheat remained inactive. There were buyers of good Genesee on terms below the views of sellers. Corn continued firm, owing to light supplies, and sales were made at full prices. Most continued in steady demand at full prices. Mye was less active, and sales made at a slight reduction on previous rates. Oats were less firm, and sales were making on terms more favorable to purchasers. From Boston we learn by telegraph that Flour and Grain were in fair request at steady prices. By our report from Baltimore, it will be seen that there was no change of moment in that market. It will be seen that the receipts by canal at Albany were light, and that Flour sold at fair prices, while Corn was in good demand. In this market, Fork sold at steady prices, while there was no change of moment in other articles of provisions. Groceries were steady, with considerable sales of sugar, without material change in prices. A moderate business was done in coffee. Tobacco and Cotton are referred to under the appropriate heads.

Assizs.—Owing to increased receipts, the market was heavy. Sales of 250 bbls. pots were made at $5.50. and 200 do pearls at $612%. Receipts 730 bbls.
